“The most important part of helping someone is to know their story”

- Lynn Owens

Forsyth Tech
COMMUNITY COLLEGE

Your New Beginning

Unprecedented Change Meets Unique New Opportunity

Lynn Owens, Forsyth Tech Employability Lab

This year was not the year many expected. In 2020, many people did not anticipate looking for a different career, a new start in the job market or returning to school. Yet, when COVID-19 was named a global pandemic in March, forcing business closings and layoffs, people met unprecedented change.

To help you make a change for the better, Forsyth Technical Community College can help update your skills to learn the most current trends in resumes and job applications.

Forsyth Tech Employability Labs in Forsyth and Stokes Counties offer resources for those seeking a job, a better job or a new career. These services are free to the unemployed or underemployed, and to those who qualify based on income.

In partnership with the King Public Library, Forsyth Tech provides Career Connections to help with resume writing, online job applications, cover letters, interview questions and even mock interviews to prepare you. Human Resources Development Instructors, Cinda Amen and Lynn Owens are also prepared to listen.

"I've been unemployed so I can share my own journey and reassure them they will find a job," said Owens. "The first thing we do with a new client is listen, the most important part of helping someone is to know their story."

In addition to Career Connections, Forsyth Tech offers an Employability Lab and Educational Career Center at West Campus in Forsyth County. The staff will assist you with: career and educational advising, assessments and planning; resume development, cover letters, interviewing techniques, and networking; internet access and help setting up e-mail accounts to assist in your job search and information and assistance for college application and financial aid.

Interested in the Employability Lab?

Go to our website www.forsythtech.edu and search for Employability Lab or Educational Career Center.
