This document is designed to complement your research on the educational and certification prerequisites for pursuing a career in Aviation Maintenance Technology on a state-by-state basis, encompassing the United States territories as well.

Educational Preparation: Students completing the Aviation Systems Technology program at Forsyth Technical Community College are trained in accordance with FAA Part 147 standards and are eligible to test for the Airframe and Powerplant (A&P) certifications through the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA).

Licensure and Certification: The FAA issues certifications nationally, and graduates who pass the A&P exams are permitted to work in any state. However, some employers or states may have additional documentation, employment screening, or continuing education requirements. Individuals pursuing careers in aviation maintenance should consult the FAA and prospective employers for specific state-level expectations.
