Computed Tomography Imaging Technology C45200SE	Nancy Andrews Hall Program Coordinator, Radiography and Computed Tomography nandrews-hall@forsythtech.edu	June 2025

This document is designed to supplement your research on the educational and certification requirements for computed tomography (CT) and magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) technologists on a state-by-state basis, encompassing the United States territories as well. .

Educational Preparation: Students completing Forsyth Technical Community College’s structured education program meet the didactic requirements necessary to sit for the American Registry of Radiologic Technologists (ARRT) post-primary certification exams in CT and/or MRI.

Licensure and Certification: While national certification through ARRT is recognized across all states, licensure requirements vary. Some states require technologists to obtain additional state-specific licensure or registration before practicing. Individuals should check with their state’s radiologic health board or licensing authority to confirm current requirements.
